Report on FDP for Teaching Staff

Practical-oriented Teaching- Effective Teaching Tools

Introduction:

The FDP was designed to address the evolving landscape of education by equipping educators with a toolkit of effective teaching methodologies. Recognizing the need for practical orientation, the program focused on hands-on activities and innovative tools to foster an interactive and engaging learning environment.

Objective:

The objective of the Faculty Development Program (FDP) was to empower educators with practical-oriented teaching strategies through the incorporation of effective teaching tools. The program aimed to engage participants actively, enhancing their learning experiences. Specific focus areas included hands-on workshops on case studies and problem-solving, simulations, collaboration, flip classrooms with industrial cases, project-based learning, and the integration of gamification.

Highlights of FDP

Hands-on Workshop on Case Studies and Problem-Solving:

- Participants delved into the art of crafting effective case studies.
- Practical sessions facilitated the development of problem-solving strategies.
- Collaborative group activities allowed for the application of learned techniques.

Simulations & Collaboration:

- An exploration of simulation tools to create real-world scenarios in a controlled environment.
- Strategies for fostering collaboration and teamwork among students.
- Hands-on activities using simulations to enhance collaborative problem-solving.

Flip Classrooms & Industrial Cases:

- Understanding the flipped classroom model and its benefits.
- Integration of industrial cases to bridge the gap between theory and real-world applications.
- Workshop sessions where participants designed flipped classroom lessons incorporating industrial cases.

Project-Based Learning and Gamification:

- Introduction to project-based learning principles and benefits.
- Exploration of gamification elements and their application in education.
- Participants actively engaged in designing project-based learning activities with gamified elements.

Outcomes:

Enhanced Participant Engagement:

- Participants reported increased engagement and enthusiasm in the classroom.
- Active participation in hands-on activities contributed to a deeper understanding of the methodologies.

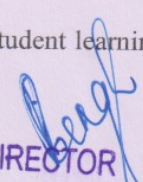

Practical Application of Teaching Tools:

- Educators demonstrated the practical application of learned tools in their respective subjects.
- Integration of case studies, simulations, and flipped classrooms in course design.

Improved Student Learning Experience:

- Implementation of the learned strategies resulted in a positive impact on student learning experiences.

- Students reported a higher level of interest and understanding of course content.

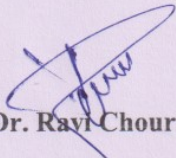

Challenges and Strategies:

- Identified challenges including resistance to change and concerns about resource availability.
- Strategies for overcoming resistance included phased implementation and showcasing the benefits of the new methodologies.
- Resource optimization strategies were discussed, emphasizing the creative use of existing resources.

Conclusion:

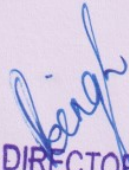

The Practical Oriented Teaching - Effective Teaching Tools FDP successfully equipped educators with practical and innovative teaching methodologies. By focusing on hands-on workshops and a variety of teaching tools, participants were empowered to enhance student engagement and learning experiences. The program fostered a culture of continuous improvement, with educators committed to applying these tools in their classrooms.

In conclusion, the FDP not only met its objectives but also created a collaborative community of educators dedicated to practical-oriented teaching. The impact of this program is anticipated to extend beyond the classroom, positively influencing both educators and students in the pursuit of effective and engaging education.

Google Tools as an Aids for Administration

Faculty Development Program for Administrative staff

Event Date: 21st to -27th September 2021

Venue – Board room

About Event –

Google Tools offer a robust suite of applications that can significantly enhance the administration of Faculty Development Programs (FDPs). This report highlights the key Google Tools and their applications to streamline administrative tasks and improve overall efficiency in organizing and managing FDPs.

Objectives”

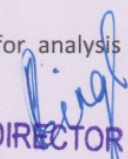

- To make the Administrative process effectively through Google and its tools
- To enable a hands on experience in google and its tools for better administration

The main Agenda for the FDP was to equip and train the administrative staff to get to know the number of google tools available for increasing the efficiency of the work. The basic topic covered in FDP are

1. Google Workspace for Education (like Gmail, Google Calendar, Google Drive, Google Docs, Google Sheets).
2. Google Forms for Registrations:

Through this form we can be able to Create custom registration forms quickly. Collect participant information in a structured manner. Automatically organize responses in Google Sheets. Easily export data for analysis and participant management.
